

Contents

I General Approaches to Treatment

1 The Needle	2	2 Thoughts on Needling within the Clinical Encounter	14
Needle Composition and Safety	2
Parts of the Needle, Lengths, and Gauges ...	2
Selecting a Needle	10	3 Treating the Spirit—Treating the Blood with Oriental Medicine	17
Angle of Insertion	11	PC-6 Nei Guan (Inner Gate)	17
Patient Positioning	11	KI-6 Zhao Hai (Shining Sea)	18
The Insertion Tube	12	KI-1 Yong Quan (Gushing Spring)	18
Clean Field	13	HT-7 Shen Men (Spirit Gate)	19
Bent, Broken, or Stuck Needles	13	SP-10 Xue Hai (Sea of Blood)	20
Needle Shock and Managing Accidents	13

II The Treatment of Specific Diseases

4 Gentle Treatment for General Anxiety Disorder, Post-traumatic Stress, and Episodic Anxiety	22	Physical Limitations	51
		Pain	51
		Treatment Modalities	51
5 The Relationship between Bunions, Sugar, and the Spleen	25	8 Help for Prolapsed Intervertebral Disks of the Lumbar Region (Herniated Disks)	59
6 An Oriental Medical Physician's Framework for the Understanding and Treatment of Cancer	29	9 Thyroid Disorders, a Study in Contrasts	63
Cancer in Western and Oriental Medicine: Etiology and Pathophysiology	29	The Early Diagnosis and Treatment of Hypothyroidism	63
Integrated Cancer Treatment Modalities— Western and Chinese	32	Hyperthyroidism	66
Conclusion	43	10 The Management of Multiple Sclerosis with the Extraordinary Vessels	69
7 Geriatric Disorders: Clinical Considerations and Treatment Modalities in Working with Elderly Patients in an Institutional Setting	45	11 The Pathophysiology and Treatment of Peripheral Neuropathy of the Upper and Lower Extremities	73
General Guidelines for the Treatment of Patients in Institutional Settings	45	12 Prolapses: Beneficial Treatment with Oriental Medicine	76
Treatment Adaptations	46	Energetics	76
Geriatric Pathology: Kidney Vacuity, Stagnant Blood, and Phlegm	46	Needling	77

13 The Treatment of Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD): Classical Points for a Contemporary Condition	79	15 Shoulder Problems: A Quick and Comprehensive Approach	85
Advice for Patients with Seasonal Affective Disorder	81	Auricular Acupuncture	85
14 A Simplified Approach to the Treatment of Scars	82	Needle LU-7	86
		Tuina (Lie Que) and/or Needles	86
		Threading	86
		Point Location Reminders	87
		16 Repetitive Motion Disorders	88

III Other Modalities—Treatment Tools Complementary to Acupuncture

17 Bleeding Techniques: Ancient Treatment for Acupuncture Physicians	92	Methods of Application	103
Clinical Notes	95	Tonification and Dispersion	106
18 Liniments, Sprays, and Powders	97	Moxa Modalities	106
19 An Overview of the Therapeutic Application of Moxibustion	101	Moxa Prescriptions	113
Functions of Moxibustion	101	20 The Mineral Infrared Therapy Device	115
Physiological Properties of Moxibustion ...	102	21 Practical Threading Therapy	117
Contraindications, Cautions, and Limitations	102	Common Points to Thread	117

IV Specialized Use of Points

22 Multiple Uses of Auricular Points	122	26 Anecdotal Point Usage	138
Point Energetics	122	Discussion—Point Combinations Lung 5 (Lie Que) and Kidney 6 (Chi Ze —Foot Marsh and Zhao Hai —Shining Sea)	138
Supplementary Points	125	Discussion—Gall Bladder 34 (Yang Lin Quan —Yang Mound Spring)	139
Techniques	126	Discussion—Spleen 6 (San Yin Jiao —Three Yin Crossing)	140
23 The Ancient Use of ST-36 (Zu San Li) with Different Needle Techniques and Point Combinations	128	27 The Role of the Heart in Needling within the Treatment Process	141
24 GV-14 (Da Zhui): Big Vertebrae—Central Reunion Point	133
25 Modern Use of the Six Divisions: A Practical Needling Strategy for Pain and Blockage	136

Appendix

Home Care Protocols	144	Further Reading	159
Glossary	155	Subject Index	162
Suppliers	158		